

The Inclosed Lines must plead my Excuse for not waiting on Miss Hamilton tomorrow Evening. Understanding his Disgrace is no secret in [redacted], I thought he could not do better than join in the Laugh against himself. He can do no more, till he receives Letters from Town, that will shew he had no Intention to abscond from his Creditors, & that it was by their own advice & concurrence he left London.

~~Heads~~ I am happy I can give you some good News along with the bad; for I believe you to be my friend, & you can feel in either. — Peruse the Inclosed from Amsterdam & return it me to morrow morning. —

It is some consolation to think that those who know me ~~best~~ best, as companions, are more my friends than my own Relations.

Indeed they know ~~more~~ little of me, than that I have spent a great deal of money; and with them, the want of Economy comprehends every sin bid

Dear

Miss Hamilton
